SHARK PRIZE AWARDED TO UNEP EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR STEINER

On 29th May the Shark Guardian Award was handed over to Achim Steiner, UNEP Executive Director, by Dr Andreas Keppeler of the German NGO Sharkproject at the Convention on Biological Biodiversity in Bonn, Germany.

The award was given in recognition of the important efforts that Mr Steiner and his organisation made to publicise the threat of mercury poisoning as a result of eating top-predator-class fish, such as sharks. UNEP's contribution to protect globally endangered populations of sharks was also a factor that determined the recognition.

Sharkproject and UNEP reaffirmed continued cooperation to establish a training programme for 8 to 10 years old children that will explain the marine food web; the virtual important role of the sharks in the marine ecosystem and how to avoid human intoxication with mercury by seafood consumption.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE "CONFRONTING FRESH WATER CRISIS IN THE MEDITERRANEAN BASIN. WHAT ROLE FOR THE EUROPEAN UNION ?"

Organized in Paris on 28th - 29th May 2008, with the support of Iddri, Blue Plan and the World Water Council, this conference aimed at attracting the general public's attention to the problems related to fresh water in the Mediterranean basin.

By considering the contributions of the different co-operation forums dealing with water in the Mediterranean, and especially the actions of the European Union, the Presidency of which will be assumed by France on 1st July 2008, this conference offered solutions that can help policy-makers.

It brought together speakers with a wide range of perspectives, from multiple countries in the Mediterranean region and from diverse backgrounds – business, public administration, NGO and academia.

In the framework of regional, European and French water policies in the Mediterranean, the following topics were addressed: climate change adaptation, public-private partnership and the agricultural model required for a sustainable water resources management.

"DESTINATIONS" PROJECT WINS ENERGY GLOBE AWARD

The International Jury of the Energy Globe Award 2007 has chosen the "Destinations" as the national winner for Algeria. The objective of the project is to propose strategies for sustainable tourism development in three pilot coastal zones: Mont Chenoua - Cap Djinet in Algeria, Central Rif in Morocco and Cap Bon in Tunisia.

This project, co-financed within LIFE - Third Countries programme of the EC, is being implemented by UNEP/ MAP centre PAP/RAC and its partners in the Maghreb countries.

The ceremony in which certificates were presented to the winners, and the international television gala for the ENERGY GLOBE World Awards took place on 26 May 2008 at the European Parliament in Brussels.

The International Energy Globe Awards (the World Awards for Sustainability) have been awarded annually since 1999 to recognise projects that make careful and economical use of resources and employ alternative energy sources.

The winners, in the categories of Earth, Fire, Water, Air and Youth, are selected by a panel including members from the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, World Bank and the European Renewable Energy Council. The awards were initiated by Austrian engineer and environmentalist Wolfgang Neumann.

CLIMATE CHANGE AWARENESS CAMPAIGN

The public awareness campaign on climate change, launched by the European Commission in May 2006, moved into its third and final stage, focusing on Hungary, Poland, the Czech Republic, Romania and Bulgaria. Entitled 'You control climate change', the campaign aims to stimulate active dialogue in these five countries, where national campaigns have not yet been implemented. The campaign will run until mid-2009 and will comprise the following actions: from June 2008, a TV advertisement showing how simple everyday actions can help to combat climate change, to be broadcast on the main youth channels and online on the campaign website; a 'Be a changer' competition, aimed at getting young people in these countries to pledge to adopt new habits and actions to help reduce greenhouse gas emissions; and an internet campaign targeting youth-focused portals and chat platforms, directing them to the 'Be a changer' competition website. This final stage of the campaign will cost €1.5 million, bringing the total two-year campaign cost to €6.2 million.
